Update from Mr Morris

It has been another busy week in school for pupils and staff. It has been very useful to get to know a good number of the children... I think I probably now know the majority. Those I am unsure of, are polite and quickly inform me of their name when I do ask. To a pupil, all continue to be routinely friendly, chatty and welcoming.

Next week is a very important one in the school calendar as governors will hopefully select a new, permanent headteacher to start in post for the beginning of the summer term. Interviews will take place on Monday and all members of the school community will be updated at some point during the school day on the Tuesday, with regards to the outcome. The pupils will play a key role in matters, with all either attending a collective worship assembly or interviewing the candidates directly, with their own set of questions.

Last Tuesday, it was fantastic to see one of our parent volunteers taking an after-school netball club. I am hopeful that later this term we can arrange a friendly netball and football fixture between Corvedale and Rushbury, here at Corvedale. Just yesterday, Father John attended school, sharing stories and asking questions around our theme of 'Trust'. The children participated enthusiastically and sung together tunelessly.

On a brief but important final note, I would like to make you aware of what I am led to believe are continuing issues with the speed of a small number of motorists on Mill Lane. There is no suggestion that these are parents arriving to drop off and collect children from school at the start and end of the day but I feel it is worth sharing all the same.

I hope you enjoy your weekend.
